

RUTH MARSHALL

Ruth inherited her passion for creative stitching and beautiful flora from her family and the environment in which she grew up. Childhood days, living in the midst of a flower farm, provided experiences that shaped who she is today.

Ruth's love of flowers and nature shine forth in her beautiful embroidery designs. Her delight in the beauty of nature was complimented by a avid family of sewers. She remembers times as a small child, sitting on the floor near her mother's sewing machine, where her mother would stitch beautiful dresses for her. Ruth grew to love sewing.

Ruth has conquered a variety of embroidery techniques, yet her students offer continual inspiration. She now teaches embroidery at The Owl's Inn Embroidery Studio and a variety of classes at Janome Penrith.

Since May 1999 Ruth had 135 embroidery articles published and keeps herself busy designing AND WORKING ON Embroidery Kits. Her passion grows out of more than mere personal achievement; it is about passing her joy and experience onto others through teaching embroidery techniques to students.
